MAYOR GOODMAN called forward CHIEF KAREN COYNE, Detention and Enforcement Department. He announced that Detention and Enforcement was formed to protect and serve the public within the City. Since then, under the leadership of CHIEF COYNE, its more than 400 employees have performed a number of vital services in the community, including animal control, parking enforcement, detention and inmate services, and emergency preparedness planning. In 1999, the Department was one of 22 law enforcement agencies in the country to obtain the prestigious Triple Crown Accreditation Award from the National Sheriffs Association. This is quite an honor because it includes accreditation from three top law enforcement agencies in the country. The Mayor honored CHIEF COYNE for 25 years of exceptional service and presented her with a Proclamation declaring June 20, 2007, to be Department of Detention and Enforcement Day.

CHIEF COYNE said that 25 years of service is cause for reflection on the accomplishments the Department has made in a short time, all of which has been done through the support of the Council, the leadership of the City's administration, the partners in public safety and the continued support of the public. She dedicated the day to the men and women of Detention and Enforcement and paid homage to those that came before the current staff and shaped the Department.
